

SANTA YNEZ VALLEY COALITION

What you can do

3 things residents can do today to preserve local land use control

1. Get informed: There are plenty of resources available with information about Camp 4 and the fee-to-trust issue. Here are 2 sites with good information to get you started:

www.SYVCoalition.com

www.countyofsb.org/tribal-matters.sbc

2. Stay engaged: Talk to your family, friends, neighbors, co-workers, etc. about this issue and share with them your views. Peer-to-peer advocacy is effective.

Attend meetings and speak out. Check the County's website listed above for information about meetings.

Communicate with policymakers about your views on this issue. Don't only wait to talk with them when they do something with which don't agree. When you agree with them, let them know that as well. Stay in contact frequently. It is a fundamental underpinning of our democracy. Below is the contact information for policymakers who directly represent the Santa Ynez Valley on this issue:

Supervisor Joan Hartmann, Third District

Santa Barbara County
(805) 686-5095 (Solvang Office)
jhartmann@countyofsb.org

Senator Dianne Feinstein

United States Senate
(310) 914-7300 (LA Office)

Representative Salud Carbajal, 24th District

U.S. House of Representatives
(805)-730-1710 (Santa Barbara Office)
<https://carbajal.house.gov/contact/email>
(email web-form)

Senator Kamala D. Harris

United States Senator
(213) 894 - 5000 (LA Office)

Santa Barbara News Press: voices@newspress.com

3. Financial Support: It takes financial resources to take on a well-funded party seeking to eliminate local control of land use for their own enrichment. We need your help to continue to mount effective challenges. Please send a check to:
